WASHINGTON, Oct. 1.—Another

Since British and French officials and American public men have decided to count the success of the proposed economic conference in Europe, I must ask those who will bring the news from their tour and use themselves to the truth. My firm declaration is that the American and the foreign public should turn to the truth and not to the propaganda.

...the field of American investments and that American experts in the market with the small capital business should vote for the can-

We must remember that half the country is still illiterate and that the vote is the exception of the country.

If Skin Breaks Out and Itches Apply Sulphur

Just the moment you apply Menthol Sulphur to an itching, burning or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a noted skin specialist. This sulphur preparation, made into a pleasant cold cream gives such a quick relief, even to very severe cases, that nothing has ever been found to take its place.

Because of its germ-destroying properties, it quickly subdues the itching, cools the irritation and heals the eczema right up, leaving a clear, smooth skin in place of ugly eruptions, rash, pimples or roughness.

You do not have to wait for improvement. It quickly shows. You can get a little jar of Rowles' Menthol Sulphur at any drug store.—Advertisement.

World's Fair Liberty Bell Lost

By United Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 31.—Parlor of the United States are searching for the lost Liberty Bell of the World's Fair. This bell, said to weigh more than a ton, has disappeared. It was cast in 1803 of precious metals and priceless relics of the Revolutionary and other wars and was meant to be a duplicate and companion piece of the original Liberty Bell of Independence Hall.

The bell was wanted for the commemorative exposition of the thirtieth anniversary of the World's Fair, October 1 to 6, directed by the Chicago Historical Society. A piece of honor was reserved for it among the works of art and relics of the World's Fair. But when the Historical Society turned to look for the bell it could not be found.

More than 250,000 persons contributed Revolutionary sword hilts, pistols, belt buckles, jewelry and other priceless relics to the casting of the bell, in addition to thousands of coins, war relics of 1812 and the Civil War. The bell was meant to honor the world after the Fair, ringing a message of peace and good will to all nations.

The Historical Society tried in vain to find a trace of the "Liberty Bell." "Glimpse Pled" Adg. Bring results, they claim. They cost only one cent a word.

Stability

Stability in saving is a great essential in gaining wealth. A constant effort and uniform method of depositing your savings will bring about that long-dreamed-of purpose. When stability is once practiced and carried out, it is difficult to give it up. With stability we always find the right kind of character that of choice and opportunity. ## AN IMPERATIVE NEED.

If for no other reason than it has been long continued the effort to have the gap in the Conneltsville-Broad Ford road closed, deserves to succeed. But there are other considerations to be taken into account. There is an element of fairness and justice to the residents of the adjacent country that cannot be disregarded if the interests of this section and a large number of very worthy citizens are to be served.

With less than a mile to be constructed the expense involved is comparatively small and should not stand in the way of carrying the project to completion. The season of the year is not at hand when the unimproved "island" will be in such a condition as will make travel over it extremely difficult and will prevent many persons coming to Conneltsville to shop and on other errands except in cases of extreme urgency. Trade will be diverted from the city and a distinct hardship will be imposed upon the residents in the section through which the road passes and for a considerable distance beyond.

Children attending school will have to wade through mud for another winter and endanger their health and suffer much discomfort from having to sit through school hours with wet shoes.

These and other considerations make it little short of imperative that this short section of road be built as promptly as possible, otherwise the people most directly interested will have just cause to feel that faith has not been kept nor good business judgment exercised by a failure to complete a road improvement commenced several years ago.

KEEPING FOOTBALL CLEAN.

The increasing popularity of football in school and college circles and to the public generally is, perhaps, more due to the spirit embodied in the game than any other sport. Fundamentally it is based upon the principle of play for play's sake. The theory of every game as played by school and college teams is to gain a given goal by overcoming whatever obstacles may be presented. In this respect football is a counterpart of the efforts necessary to win success in life, hence overcoming the artificial obstacles in the game is akin to overcoming the natural obstacles in life. It is this that gives football a thrill and satisfaction not experienced in other games which have become more or less commercialized.

The policy and practice of present day coaches of college football teams have done much to elevate the game and cause it to appeal to the public as offering an opportunity to witness contests between clean, well trained, clean-thinking, quick-acting strong young men. But the chief fascination of the game lies in the fact that its rules and those of life are much the same. That is the philosophy of Fielding H. Yost, director of athletics at the University of Michigan, and one of the most famous and highly esteemed living football coaches. Of the analogy between football and life "Hurry Up" Yost, as he is familiarly known, says:

"Both games are governed by certain boundary lines and rules. Loyalty is one of the greatest assets a man can bring to either game—loyalty to a purpose, to a university, to a friend.

"In life, as on the football field, one must learn to face opposition without flinching, even if the opposition seems stronger than he can resist. Athletes must summon up determination, will power, grit, courage and persistence to overcome any obstacles that may be in their way. Football men are battered in every game; they are not good players who do not come up more determined than ever. So it is in life.

"On the football field and in life, one should endeavor to make his distance and never be held for downs. Once stopped, however, he should not be discouraged, but come back with greater determination than ever before.

"When the game is going against him a real football player keeps his head up, sets his jaws and digs in all the harder. This is what tests the stuff he is made of. So it is in life.

"One cannot win the game on his own side of the scrimmage line. He must be aggressive and carry the fight to the enemy.

"No game can be won today on what was done last week. Every contest demands the best efforts of every player. Over-confidence has no place in football or in life. Too many games have been lost that way.

"A football player or a player in the game of life should never think his preliminary work. It is here that he gets the training which will enable him to make accurate decisions and to act upon them instantly.

"So how little but how much one can live should govern him in whatever he undertakes. There is no place on the eleven or a man who is giving the least. The man who puts the most time into the game will get the most out of it. This is equally true of life.

Every true lover of athletic sports, every citizen interested in protecting young people of today from influences that will prevent them attaining the largest success in their future lives, ought to have a very lively concern in preserving the game of football as a clean sport—played only at such times and under such circumstances as will insure it being kept free of commercialism, betting and other features which, to a large extent, have degraded other sports.

Let football be, indeed, "a play for play's sake," and, as Coach Yost admonishes, "Above all, play fair," to all that pertains to the game.

Arctic Island Helps World To Keep Warm

Spitzbergen, where favorable weather during the past summer permitted the making of important surveys never before possible, has a unique interest because it is one of the few Arctic or Antarctic lands that are being made to yield up minerals in the temperate zones, according to a bulletin from the National Geographic Society.

"The northern tip of Alaska to which a few government officials visit each summer, is a gem all too little known to the North Pole for the average dwelling of the warmer regions of the earth to live in unless he is pursuing scientific investigations," says the bulletin. "In Spitzbergen, however, which is 500 miles closer to the top of the world, several hundred ordinary men of Europe and America are making their homes the year round while they strip coal from beneath the ice-covered mountains. It is excellent coal, too, and there is every reason to believe that the mining operations will grow steadily."

Formerly was "No-man's Land."

"The discovery early in the twentieth century, that Spitzbergen's coal underlies large areas brought it suddenly back to the world's attention and made sovereignty over it well worth claiming after it had been abandoned for generations as a sort of no-man's land. Parents, a Dutchman, discovered Spitzbergen in 1596, according to the usual records, but the Norwegians claim that their seamen visited the islands at earlier dates. Henry Hudson, searching for a northern passage to the Orient in 1607, learned of the vast number of whales near the islands and, as a result, Spitzbergen's waters became for a time the world's greatest whale fishery.

"The Dutch were foremost in this development. By the time of America's Revolutionary War whalers from the Netherlands had taken about $100,000,000 worth of whale products from the region. Dutch became a great in the early years of the exploitation that the ships were embarrassed to haul the blubber home.

An Arctic "Summer Town."

"A thriving 'summer town,' Smørum, was established and flourished for a score of years. It was an anomalous community, a Dutch town in the frozen Arctic, with its shops, drinking places, and bakeries in addition to the oil refineries, cooperage establishments and smithies of the whaling industry. When the whalers

Hasty Marriage And Divorce

Wilkinson-Barnes Record.

According to the West Chester Daily Local News, 12 of the 48 divorces granted by the Chester county court since the first of March affected couples that had been married at Elkton, Md. Elkton is a convenient place for couples that desire to be married in haste or in secrecy and for whom the laws of neighboring states are too restrictive. The Elkton marriages that were annulled endured a comparatively short time. This is the record of only one county in Pennsylvania. The number of divorces resulting from Elkton marriages in other counties in Pennsylvania is not stated.

The divorce record is growing throughout the country, but the number attributed to the hasty marriages is proportionately larger than the number resulting from marriage after longer acquaintance.

"Political Enemies," Forbes' Reply To Booze Orgy Charges Before Sen. Reed's Committee

WASHINGTON—Sensational "booze orgy" and graft charges against Col. Charles R. Forbes, resigned head of the Veterans Bureau, are the work of political enemies, according to Forbes' reply, made before the senate investigating committee.

Wild drinking parties, in which Forbes became so exhilarated that he and a woman jumped into a lake near Spokane, Wash., were denied by Forbes as the work of "somebody's imagination."

The investigation is being pushed through by Senator David A. Reed, chairman of the committee.

Short Talks on Advertising

Copyrighted By Charles Austin Bates NEW YORK 1923

No. 5.

We buy a can of soup for twelve cents and a motor car for not much more, because they are advertised. Try to make an equal portion of soup and see what it costs. Make fifty portions for sale to the neighbors and the cost is less, but yet the economics of ten thousand portions are not reached. Not, just between ourselves where the home cook can't hear, is the quality as good.

Without advertising no one could have a market for soup in ten thousand can lots. Without advertising you and I and Mrs. Robinson would not know the existence of such a thing as canned soup at any price. And the grocer who stocked it would keep it on his shelves till the labels sloughed off.

Telling people of the existence of a useful thing is as legitimate a part of its cost as the material from which it is made. Nothing exists for us until it is made. Nothing exists for us until it is made.

Two have knowledge of it. The alarm clock made in Connecticut doesn't wake anyone up in Kansas until the Kansas folks are told how and from whom to procure it.

But every clock sold in Kansas reduces the cost of making it in Connecticut. If the Connecticut manufacturer made clocks only for his own home town the price would be fifty dollars per clock, instead of one dollar.

The manufacturer spends two or three cents of each dollar he receives in telling more people about his product. The more people he tells and the more they buy, the greater becomes his economies in production. The lower his price to the retail market, the more he supplies you so promptly and conveniently with the comfort and necessities of life.

And where should you expect to find the cost as the material from which it is made. Nothing exists for us until it is made. Nothing exists for us until it is made.

Brave Defense

Because he had made him wear short socks instead of stockings the clergyman's wife was apprehensive when her small son, Bobby, returned from his first day at public school. When he had gone to kindergarten the boys had made fun of his abbreviated leg covering, and he had cried bitterly after his first school day.

"Did the boys make fun of your socks?" asked his mother anxiously as Bobby swung through the gate.

"Yes, Johnson did."

"What did my brave boy say?"

"I said, 'You got on stockings like your mother wears and I am wearing socks like my dad!'"

With the "Extra Power" Motor of the New Five Passenger Sedan

REGARDLESS of the fact that this popular Cleveland model has a reputation for great durability, comfort and economy, a large part of its popularity can be directly traced to the amazing performance qualities of the new "extra power" motor under its hood.

This new motor is the outstanding engineering achievement in the light six field. It is more compact than the motor of the average light six, yet it develops from 16% to 30% more power between 10 and 35 miles an hour.

That's why the Cleveland Six shoots out swiftly ahead in traffic—why it passes bigger and costlier cars on hills with an ease that is almost unbelievable in a closed car so moderately priced and so sturdily constructed.

MANY ODD FISH IN PHILIPPINES

Some Carry Electric Shock,
Others Live on Land.

CATCH SHARKS 70 FEET LONG

Isaiah Walton's "Compliment Angler," that mellow masterpiece of piscatorial erudition, must be rewritten. For even the placid world of the angler has not escaped the common fate of increasing complexity. Fish that carry an electric shock, fish that live on land and drown in water, fish that pass their lives inside other fish, full-grown fish so small that ten thousand of them make a light breakfast; fish, in fact, whose tares, scientific description recently by Dr. Albert Herre, fish expert of the Philippine bureau of science, before a Manila chamber of commerce has made all accounts of near-caught marvels of the tiny tribe appear pale and puny, are now as familiar to residents of Manila as are subway, skyscrapers, and automobiles to New Yorkers.

Fish Shoots Deadly Poison.
A perfectly transparent fish, with skin like celluloid and its fins placed where its head and tail should be, probably the most unique fish in existence, is among the strange and rare varieties found in Philippine waters. Another curious fish looks for all the world like a rock. Should a human being step on it it squirts a jet of deadly poison from its shell.

Expert fishermen enjoy meeting the tanguligue. It is the gamiest Philippine fish and a tarlar when hooked. Soldiers of Uncle Sam's forces stationed in the islands dearly love the sport afforded by this doughy warrior, usually rewarding it with freedom. The sea-horse, so-called because its head bears a remarkable resemblance to that of a horse, is the fish whose males carry the eggs in their tails, hutch them, and bring up the young.

Fish Carries Eggs in Its Mouth.
A climbing perch was recently found in a dead-end lot in the heart of Manila. It was clinging to a tree, four feet above the water. This fish starts out in a single direction and never alters it, climbing over obstacles and jumping three feet off the ground and as far along it. A variety of catfish found in Luzon carries its eggs in its mouth. There are also plenty of pompano, tuna, and lamp-lug. The latter is a beautifully-colored fish, revealing the butterfly and hummingbird in its variegated markings.

The tiger shark, or man-eating variety, another favorite fellow of the soldiers, is an inhabitant of Manila bay. Sharks 70 feet long and thick in proportion are caught in the waters of the Philippines. Few people know that commercial cod liver oil is really shark liver oil. It has also been discovered recently that the liver of the Philippine shark will yield a substance used in manufacture of the new diabetes cure, insulin.

Saw-Fish 22 Feet Long.
Ray fish that give an electric shock are common in the waters about Manila. Huge barracuda, six feet or more in length and more dangerous to man than the shark, swim about in Philippine waters. Inside the sea-cucumber, a variety of jelly-fish lives a smaller fish similar to the sandpiper. Sardines without number abound hereabouts, but residents import others, there being no canneries in the islands. At Cebu recently a saw-fish 22 feet long was caught. With its great tail it attacks schools of small fish, slicing this way and that with deadly effect.

A sword-fish, 20 feet in length, was pulled out of Manila bay not long ago. The sword of another sword-fish was found embedded in a copper-shelved block of wood nine inches thick, giving some notion of the force with which this fish strikes. The fish was brought in to Manila by a corporal in one of the infantry regiments there and kept as a souvenir. A smaller fish lives along the edges of the numerous rivers of the Philippines and never goes into the water. It lives as long as its gills are kept moist and has been known to exist this way four or five days.

1,800 Varieties Found.
The daling, a common Philippine table fish, which frequents the rice paddies, must have air in order to live and drowns miserably when placed in water where it cannot come up readily for its supply of oxygen. Another is a member of the busy tribe is the tooth, which in times of danger blows itself up with air or water until it assumes the shape of a toy balloon, then floats on the water's surface, stimulating death.

Of all the eighteen hundred varieties of fish in the Philippines the smallest is the teen, found only in Lake Balab, in the province of Cebu. The teen is a tiny fish, scarcely a length of one quarter of an inch. Yet some of the largest whales ever seen have come ashore in Philippine waters, particularly in the vicinity of Cebu.

Rues Town and Owner of Cow.
Suit for $20,000 damages has been filed against the town of South Bristol, N. Y., and George Standish by Charles P. Granger of Rochester. Granger claims his cow owned by Standish, the man and his wife were hurt from their car, Mrs. Granger being killed.

Depth of Human Degradation—
Cut Them Out of Films.

Remarkable penalties are exacted in some countries from those found indulging in kissing. In Milan guilty parties are liable to a heavy fine; in certain towns in Russia before the war it was also a punishable offense; while elsewhere men cannot kiss the women-folk on Sunday without risk of prosecution.

Recently, in Belgium, a man and his wife were fined 78 francs each for having kissed in public. This case is all the more surprising, as in Belgium and France a public kiss between spouses on meeting or separation is recognized as a traditional salute.

In Japan kissing is looked upon as the depth of human degradation. Every kiss in film has to be cut out, and there are film censors who do almost nothing else but look out for kisses.

Perhaps the worst sufferers from the kissing habit are railway authorities, and in a number of instances kissing on the station platform is forbidden in view of the delay thus caused. Special notices to this effect were issued by the Bavarian state railways.

The penny platform tickets were introduced on railways in England during the war to prevent kissing on the platform and consequent delay.

How did kissing originate? The Bible is full of kissing of the widest range, from the treacherous kiss of Judas to Jacob's kiss under the stars of Rachel at the well. The early Romans sealed all their nuptials with kisses, and kisses were a popular observance among the early Christians until, in 307, such salutes between the sexes were forbidden.

If we are to credit the Scandinavian tradition, kissing was a pleasurable habit introduced into England by Rooveen, the beautiful Saxon.

Kisses have helped in no small degree to mold history. In 1704 the beautiful duchess of Gordon founded and raised the Gordon Highlanders, one of the most noted of Highland regiments, by kissing.—Baltimore Sun.

USE NEWSPAPERS FOR WALLS

Two Thousand Tons Shipped From Europe in Year—Helps Keep Vermin From Houses.

The Chinese, it is thought, are the greatest of all consumers of old newspapers. The official returns of the customs-house at Newchang show that that port alone, during the year for which figures are available, received approximately 2,000 tons of old European newspapers valued at $75,000.

It is not at first easy to imagine to what use so much obsolete news can be put. It is, however, ascertained that the middle class Chinese prefer newspaper to native wall paper as a covering for their walls. It has a greater power of resistance and affords a more effective barrier to the invasions of the vermin that infest Chinese houses, often driving out the inmates.

Moreover, the Chinese are experts at rubbing out of newspapers waistcoats which they wear next to the skin. These paper waistcoats are said to be the best possible protection against a sudden "cold snap." In view of these admirable uses to which European newspapers may be put, it is not surprising to learn that the imports constantly show increasing weight. It should be added, however, that the value of the imports has declined. This fact is explained by the rapid development of the native newspaper press that has occurred during the last few years.

Franks of Climate Shown.
Thorough underground observation stations, scientists have recently completed a series of experiments that indicate Mt. Desert Island, a few miles off the coast of Maine, has a higher average temperature and greater evaporation than Long Island, more than 200 miles to the south. The recording instruments consist of thermometers that register maximum and minimum temperatures and specially designed bottles, filled with distilled water and fitted with porous stoppers that protrude above the ground. When the sun strikes them, the liquid is drawn from the glass containers in the same manner that moisture is extracted from the earth. Measurements of the water are taken at intervals and the differences noted give the amount of evaporation. On this island, trees, flowers, and plants that are characteristic of the lands of Joe and the more southern climates thrive, while birds of the Arctic and the south-land make it their common home during the spring and summer months.—Popular Mechanics.

The Tomb of Cyrus.
In a remarkable ruin, in a tolerable state of preservation, at Pasargadae in ancient Babylonia, is the tomb of Cyrus. It has been called "a house upon a pedestal," and consists of a pyramidal base constructed of huge blocks of white marble, surmounted by a house of the same material, covered with a sloping stone roof. The interior consists of a small chamber, ten feet long, seven feet wide and eight feet high, entered by a low and narrow door; there was deposited, in a golden coffin, the body of the great conqueror. It is supposed that a row of 24 columns (some of whose broken shafts still remain) enclosed the sacred spot. On these mutilated columns is reportedly found the inscription (written in Persian and in the so-called Median): "I am Cyrus the King, the Achæmenian."

JEWETT SIX PAIGE BUILT

At Detroit

Look at the Way It's Built—
A Sturdy Six—Not a Light Six

SOME folks make a mistake. They class the new Jewett Six with "light" sixes. It costs so little more than "light" sixes. But Jewett is a very different car. It is sturdy, powerful, rugged, fine performing.

To find a car of the new Jewett's sturdiness you must pay $200 to $500 more. It is the only car in the thousand-dollar field built for sturdiness, dependability and performance. Jewett's six-cylinder, 50 horse-power motor fills the hood. One look at the motor of any other comparable car and you'll realize why Jewett will pass most any car on a hill. Jewett accelerates from 5 to 25 miles an hour in 7 seconds, in high gear. Such power was never before put into a car this size.

Not any car near the new Jewett's size and price so strongly built. Jewett's car weighs 2800 lbs., without equipment. This is 200 to 400 lbs. more than "light" sixes. These additional pounds mean sturdier construction—thousands and thousands of miles—longer life. And more comfort and smoothness every one of those miles!

Ask any Jewett owner to lift the hood and show you the way Jewett's built. Or come in and let us show you, not only the motor, but the 6-inch-deep frame, Paige-Timken axles, front and rear, all-steel universal joints, and springs that are 80% of its wheelbase. Then you'll see why Jewett is called a Sturdy Six.

NUMBER OF BELL TELEPHONES IN PENNSYLVANIA 1919-1923

Seventy-Six Thousand New Telephones

That's the number of new Bell Telephones which are being added to the Bell System in Pennsylvania this year, making a total of 850,000.

ADDED is the word, for 76,000 is the net figure. To realize this net gain, we must install a total of 150,000 telephones, not including some fifty thousand moved from one address to another during the year.

And a further gain of 83,500 is expected in 1924.

Installing the telephone instrument, however, is the smallest part of the job.

To carry out our full $30,200,000 program this year means 52 large building operations, half a million miles of new wire, ten millions of dollars in new switchboards and Central Office equipment.

This is the most stupendous construction program ever undertaken in our telephone history.

It is our response to the demand of the people of Pennsylvania for more and more telephones.

JOSEPH GREER and His DAUGHTER by HENRY KITCHELL WEBSTER.

CHAPTER II

The Better Half.
Joe invited her to such a dinner one night in May about a month after the directors' meeting, and within a few days of his return from a trip to the Northwest where he'd been engaged in settling the last details and letting the contractors for the construction of their new factories.

Invitations of this sort weren't so very frequent, and they generally had a real occasion. He had something he wanted to talk with her about, he said. "Oh, it's got nothing to do with any of this," she smiled as he added on leaving her, "I'm going to surprise you, Jennie."

A dinner at Joe's flat, whatever its occasion, deserved to be treated as a party, so she went home a little early from the office—there wasn't so very much to do these days—and dressed in a jaunty and luxurious manner in a satin frock which she had bought, luckily, only the week before. Jennie candidly enjoyed dressing up, and one of her few grievances against the sort of life she led was that it offered so few opportunities for this indulgence.

The dinner was at seven-thirty, and it was still broad daylight when she packed her little coupe in the side street nearest Joe's doorway. In the doorway she found Joe's chauffeur waiting under his employer's orders for her to drive up so that he might take her car into the garage and bring it around again whenever she wanted it.

He was a prepossessing youngster who had taken this job on getting demobilized from the army a few weeks previously. The irregular hours and the touch of variety about it made it, Jennie supposed, less unattractive to him than most of the berths open to a man in his position. But he was too good, she thought, for this sort of thing—taking Joe's actresses on joy-rides in the small hours of the morning, and so on, and she made a mental note to herself to look for a resolution to persuade Joe to find something better for him to do. His name was George Burns.

She told him her car was all right where it was, and that when she was ready to go she wouldn't mind going out to it alone, so if this was to have been his only duty for the evening he might as well consider himself at liberty. He thanked her, but he guessed from his manner that he didn't intend to act upon her permission. In the same moment she realized, and she blushed a bright pink as it broke over her, that the boy was shocked. That he attributed it must be that a sinister interpretation to her visit. Once or twice he'd driven her home from the office when she'd worked late, and they'd got to be quite good friends. Thought he seemed to see her in a new and rather lurid light.

In the elevator she decided she'd say nothing about the encounter to Joe, at least until she'd cooled down enough to laugh over it. But he, meeting her in the hall as the butler opened the door for her, had it all out of her in two minutes.

"Good Lord, Jennie! What's the matter with you?" he asked at sight of her.

"And to her 'Well, what is?' he answered. 'You look—as if you'd just been kissed by a traveling man.'

At that, she laughed and told him. "That's a nice mess," he commented with a grin. "Here, give me your keys. And go and take off your cloak. You know the room, don't you? I'll be back in a minute. No, I don't blame him a bit. It's all your fault."

He had, it struck her, a rather thoughtful air when he joined her a few minutes later in the drawing-room. He stood for a moment a little way off, candidly regarding her before he spoke.

"You wear better-looking clothes than most of the women who have nothing to do but buy them. How do you manage it, Jennie?"

She felt that her new frock was vindicated, for it wasn't often he showed the slightest consciousness of what she wore.

"I happen to be the right size to wear models," she said. "That's the answer. It saves a lot of trouble."

"The right size and the right shape," he amended. "It's more than your clothes that looks good to me."

There was the same quality, oddly reflective for him, about his gesture, for as he finished speaking he came up and took her by both bare arms just above the elbow, gently enough, as if he merely meant to hold her there until the end of his train of thought.

She was perfectly comfortable, in his hands like that, but it struck her—perhaps because of her recent encounter with George Burns—as rather funny that this should be true. They were great, powerful, hairy hands that held her, and the face, so now hers, could take on, easily enough, a cruel look. She allowed herself to smile over her own complacency.

With a grunt, he released her and stepped away. "You don't mind me a bit, do you?" he remarked. "And you know me pretty well, too, wouldn't you say?"

"Pretty well—as far as I go," she qualified. "No, I didn't mind. I know you play fair."

"I went to dinner with the Cravens last night," Joe said, over his breast of guinea-fowl. "Henry and his sister, at their flat. So I suppose you've got a right to say that I'm turning respectable," he concluded.

Clearly, he was embarrassed about it, an amazing phenomenon to be seen in Joe. Jennie suppressed an impulse to laugh at him and asked him, with a good appearance of sobriety, if he'd had a good time.

He told her, a little dubiously, that he had; a first-rate time it would have been, except that he didn't quite get them.

A moment later he laughed again and sat back in his chair.

"Well, that's the funny way life works," he said. "Just as I'm getting ready to settle down and behave myself my wife's lawyer writes me to say she's going to get a divorce."

Jennie stared at him in clear incredulity. When she could think at all, she tried to warn herself that this was one of his jokes, but it wouldn't work. She knew him too well to be deceived. "Your—wife!" she echoed blankly.

"Didn't I tell you you were going to be surprised?" he said.

After a silence of a minute she asked, "How long have you been married, Joe?"

"Oh, twenty years, about. Annabel and I were really married—living together, I mean—about six months. I haven't seen her in nineteen years. She lives out in Pasadena with her father; her mother died a couple of years ago. It wasn't up to me, was it, to tell you the day you came to work for me that I was a married man not living with my wife?"

"Oh, it's been kind of a dirty deal all round. I guess that's why I've wanted to keep it dark. I've done a whole lot worse things," he went on, feeling his way, "and haven't cared a damn who knew 'em. And I never tried to make anybody think I was a plaster angel. But this proposition—well, I never knew my own mind about it. I've always thought I might clean it up some day. Only when I did, I wanted to be in position to do it brown, see, the handsome thing, as there wouldn't be anything left to be said."

"And I give you my word, Jennie, I was getting ready to do it. And than I was—It would have made quite a difference if I'd known that sooner," he added.

Jennie remarked that twenty-five wasn't too old for a girl to marry. But Joe said this wasn't what he meant. She was too old not to be more grown up than she was.

"You see, she'd been having a fight with her father and mother. She wanted to be an artist, a sculptor, and they wouldn't let her. She'd been going down to the Art Institute for quite a while taking lessons in drawing and designing, china-painting. I don't know what—maybe a little something—But now it was a question of a life chess, and they wouldn't hear of it."

"Well, that interested me in her a whole lot more than I'd been before, and she had a father and mother who had taken account of her. I was the next chance I got I tried to put in a word for her. It was a fool thing to do, of course. It got Annabel in wrong, worse than ever, for discussing such a subject with a young man—she, herself, was furious with me at first for not having seen that—and they were already suspicious that I wasn't quite as good as I looked."

"Now, here's a funny thing, Jennie. Here's a question I've asked myself a thousand times: Will you tell me why I didn't just pack my trunk at that point and clear out? I was tired of the old people and I wasn't in love with Annabel, not one little bit. I didn't even want her in a temporary sort of way. There were girls growing on every bush that were more attractive, that way, than she was. But I didn't get out. I was on my own, and I was on my own."

"We had a hell of a time. The old folks would hardly speak to me. They sat around and kept watch so that I shouldn't be alone with Annabel. I think the only reason they didn't turn me out of the house was because they figured it was easier to keep us apart as things were, having a line on me, than if they hadn't any idea where I was."

"Well, the episode of it was that one day, along that summer, we took the day-hoat—the old wheelback, it was—to Milwaukee, got a license and a minister to marry us, and spent the night at the Plunkington hotel. Came home on the train the next morning."

"The old folks wouldn't take us in—and it wasn't a bluff either. But I found a furnished flat over in Hyde Park—it was easy enough to do in those days—and set up house-keeping. I'd suggested a couple of rooms in some family hotel so that she could have more time to herself. But she didn't want that. I was beginning to wonder about that famous career of hers that the whole row had been about. Finally I asked her one day why she didn't go over to the Art Institute and register in the life class. I remember how she looked at that and just what she said. She gave me a stare and then a sort of a laugh, doubtful whether I wasn't joking, and she said, 'Why, you silly old thing, what do I want to go there for, now?'

"She hadn't any idea what marriage was about, Jennie. Apparently supposed there was nothing to it beyond housekeeping and a little familiarity. And she couldn't stand me—that's the long and the short of it. Lord! but she was conscientious—all three of them were that. And she must have had a talk with her mother that straightened things out a little. The one thing that reconciled her to the relation at all was that it was legal and binding—going to last forever."

"I can't think of a worse mixup than that. Because with me, well, it had been like this. I'd never had anything to do with a woman before. I never have since, for that matter—who would in love with a man, anyway, for the time being anyhow. So this was wrong all round. Yet she might have made some other sort of man a good wife and been happy with him. But she didn't like me, even in other ways. I think I frightened her without meaning to. The way I talked shocked her. I tried to reform for a while. Good God! I've seen her turn white over a plain 'hell' or a 'damn' or two that I'd used without thinking. I never swore at her—Never swore at you, either, did I?"
